FAQ

Penectomy And Castration Photos

Oh dear, Mr Travis. You've been bitten in the tip by a Tasmanian Red spider. That's very nasty.

OK. The good news is that it's treatable. If the poison hasn't spread, actually I can just suck it out. If it has started to spread down the penis, then I'm afraid we're going to have to amputate.

Now I'm just going to listen to your pulse down here. If it's slow enough, the poison hasn't spread and I'll start sucking it out. If it's fast, I'll perform an emergency penectomy. Either way, you'll be out of danger in five minutes – I've got everything I need for the penectomy right here. So don't worry.

I need to time the pulse over two minutes, OK? So just try to stay calm, or that'll drive the pulse up - give us a false positive. You might want to count the seconds... 120, 119...you know? Or maybe just try to think about something else for two minutes.

Here we go.
